Graduate of Associate of Business Administration (General Management) in 2005

Student of Bachelor of Business Administration (Honors) in Finance (Year 3), City University of Hong Kong and has been on the Dean's List

I think it is not just the knowledge that you get out of an Associate Degree programme, but also learning how to pave your way for the future. Throughout my studies, I was given ample opportunities to equip myself with practical experiences, such as participating in a one-year consultancy project for Small-and-Medium Enterprises and an internship programme with the Hospital Authority.

One of the most important things I found was the professionalism and heart that my teachers put in their teaching. I just felt it priceless and unforgettable to share the experiences of such learned people. There is really no better way to learn. What you get out of this really benefits your life forever. Some people can truly transform you.

After two years of discipline, I have come to realize that plain hard work can overcome great odds and bring you success. I feel possessed with the drive to excel in my studies and career, if only to prove that Associate Degree graduates can be as competitive as the others. I won't let anyone tell me that I can't be as good.

I want to thank every staff in CCCU for their enlightenment, guidance and help. If I have not been very convincing, please come and find out for yourselves how an Associate Degree programme can turn your life around for you. It's all a matter of your attitude.
