Graduate of Associate of Social Science in Community Services Management in 2002

Assistant Leisure Services Manager II in Leisure and Cultural Services Department

A few years ago when I received my public examination results I felt I had sunken to the bottom of an abyss, and the opportunity to study in the Associate of Social Science in Community Services Management (CSM) gave me truly the chance of a lifetime.

Following my graduation I now hold a modest employment in the Government, but this would have never happened were it not for the chance I got.

One opportunity after another appeared before my eyes following my graduation from the CCCU. For the first time in my life, I truly had a choice. Just one year later, I was wearing my graduation gown with the achievement of BA (Hons) Leisure Management from the Manchester Metropolitan University in the United Kingdom.

Getting distinguished results in my studies restored my self-confidence immeasurably, and in 2005, I finally achieved my Master of Social Science in Sport and Leisure Management from the Hong Kong Baptist University. With the benefit of hindsight, the decision to get into an Associate Degree programme was one that changed my life for the better forever. It enlightened my mind, opened up vistas, and fired the imagination. And in my case, what could be imagined – was achieved.
