

Chow Ka-yee

Graduate of Associate of Business Administration (General Management) in 2008

Student of Bachelor of Business Administration in Marketing, City University of Hong Kong

I think my personal story in the College is similar to those of many. In Semester A Year 1, I was struggling to adapt to the new environment and did not get very good grades. But after that I settled down and studied hard and, with the support of my peers and tutors, I managed to bring my GPA up to 4. This was a very significant improvement and it secured me a scholarship and the chance to articulate into a bachelor's degree programme. I am now a Year 2 student in the Department of Marketing at City University. As Obama, the US President-elect, puts it "Yes, we can!", we need to always remind ourselves to do better. When you perform less than satisfactorily, it doesn't mean you are a loser. We are still young and we should be able to do more. Understanding our weaknesses and endeavouring for improvement is critical for success.