OTHER RESEARCH-RELATED ACTIVITIES

Ranked outlets listed above shall be the main measuring yardsticks of a faculty's research performance. However, research-related activities listed below may also be considered in a faculty's overall performance in research:

1. Articles in field-related magazines and non-academic media; media interviews.
2. Lectures and workshops; panel discussions or round tables; public symposiums or seminars.
3. Organization and management of field-related activities (e.g. conferences, workshop, seminar etc).

APPENDIX

DEFINITIONS

“Internationalism”

An outlet is defined as international when both of the following criteria are met: (a) it involves international artists and/or collaborators, (b) it involves international juries or curators.

When only one of the two conditions, either (a) or (b), is met, the faculty may present evidence that the venue is internationally visible, for example, by showing reviews and/or reports in substantial international publications.

A “local” outlet refers to venues that are geographically limited in its curatorial direction and transnational visibility.

“Public funding”

Public funding is defined as funding from government agencies (e.g. Hong Kong Arts Development Council, the Leisure and Cultural Services Department), non-profit foundations (e.g. Robert H. N. Ho Family Foundation, New York Foundation for the Arts), charitable organizations (e.g. Hong Kong Jockey Club), or arts and culture advocacy organizations (e.g. Asian Cultural Council, Asia Society, Asian American Arts Alliance).

“Leading”

No definition of “leading professional associations or learned societies in the field” in the conferences category is offered. At present, the school finds it satisfactory to leave it to the individual faculty to make a case for the ranking of the conference in question. The school shall revisit this issue after the first round of PBPR exercise.

PROCEDURE

- Each faculty is required to self-rank her/his research outputs into A+, A, B+, B or C in accordance with the school's guideline in the creative arts, humanities, and technical publications.
- In the humanities, colleagues need only submit additional information if the journal or publisher is NOT on the list. Faculty could in such a case submit: (1) the title page of the journal, and (2) the contents page, showing the title and author of the faculty member's contribution.
- In the creative arts, colleagues may submit as much information as she/he deems appropriate to justify her/his self-ranking. Such information may include but not limited to house program, exhibition catalogue, publicity material, press clipping, review. In cases where an output falls under more than one category, the category with the higher grade point applies.
- In the humanities, in case where a journal, publisher or conference falls under more than one of the lists cited (ERIH, ERA, SENSE, SCM's own etc.), the higher grade point applies.
- Prior to a pay-review meeting, faculties' self-ranking will be sent to the School Performance Assessment Committee (SPAC) for review. The committee may collectively decide to endorse or suggest modification to these rankings. In the case of modification, the committee will provide reasons. The committee's recommendations will be release to faculties no less than a week before the meeting.
- Upon request, a faculty may ask to appear before the committee at the pay-review meeting to discuss her/his self-ranking, and if applicable, to provide further justification for her/his research outlet rankings.
- In the case of further dispute over outlet ranking classification, a faculty may appeal to an external advisory committee. The decision of the external advisory committee shall be final.

YEARLY REVIEW OF CRITERIA

SPAC and faculty will be invited to suggest modification and/or addition to the PBPR criteria and the above-stated procedure before the beginning of each academic year in June/July. These suggestions will be accompanied by justification and will be presented to an external advisory committee for evaluation.
