The University’s continued goal is to provide the best possible teaching and learning experience while prioritizing student and staff safety and well-being. Having considered the recent development of COVID-19, the University would like to make the following adjustments to the teaching and learning arrangements for Semester A 2020/21:

1. For sessions that have been arranged to be delivered in a real-time interactive online format through Zoom via Canvas, students may now seek approval from the respective course teachers to attend classes on campus starting from 28th September 2020. To facilitate this arrangement, academic staff should perform teaching duties at the scheduled times and classrooms on campus.

2. To safeguard the health and safety of staff and students by ensuring appropriate social distancing, academic units may arrange to have students attending classes on rotation basis.

3. Academic staff should record their lectures and will upload recordings so that students who are unable to be in Hong Kong can continue their studies wherever they are.

The University will continue to closely monitor the health situation and may further adjust teaching and learning arrangements if required. In the event that it becomes unsafe to conduct face-to-face teaching again, the University will give adequate notice and return entirely to real-time interactive online teaching.

The University strictly follows the Government infection control measures. Colleagues and students who come to the campus must adhere to Government and University safety and health guidelines. Non-adherence may result in disciplinary action.

Thank you again for your understanding and cooperation during this challenging period. Please stay safe and healthy!
