Learning Medical Ethics by Interaction with Vietnamese Medical Students and Fieldtrips to Vietnam

Project Number: 6000588

Principal Investigator: Dr. Thi Nguyet Minh LE

Grant Type: TSG

Abstract:

Bioethics is an essential course for medical professionals. I am teaching this course to undergraduate students in Biomedical Sciences. To help the students understand the ethical issues and help the healthcare professionals in developing countries, I plan to establish a bioethics research project that involves various interaction between my students and Vietnamese medical students in collaboration with a lecturer at Hanoi Medical College. This project will allow the students to exchange their learning materials, to meet and discuss extensively about the ethical issues and how to apply ethics principles to solve real-life problems based on cases that they observe in Vietnam.
