

GE 1356 Introduction to Data Science

Data is everywhere and driving innovations and productivity at an unprecedented scale and depth. The education for understanding data and its relevance and applicability is important and urgent. This course consists of a modern introduction to data science with essential elements and provides a few lectures on various applications from external industrial guest speakers.