2. Course intended learning outcomes (CILOs)

Upon successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

No.	CILOs	Weighting
1	describe the generic formats of theses and research articles and adapt the formats in order to organize their research writing effectively;	15%
2	describe and present in coherent fashion the essential types of information needed in the key sections of a thesis and a research article;	25%
3	describe and employ various linguistic conventions and strategies of citation needed to create well-integrated, meaningful prose and to establish their own authorial voices when drawing on others' work in their writing;	25%
4	describe and employ various strategies and linguistic resources needed to construct cogent arguments;	15%
5	describe the process of journal publishing as well as the various strategies needed and apply the knowledge to publish parts of their theses in international refereed journals.	20%

3. Teaching and learning activities (TLAs)

ILO No	TLAs	Hours/week
1-4	▪ Interactive lectures ▪ Small group discussions ▪ Guided analyses of different types of research texts such as qualifying reports, theses and research articles ▪ Short writing tasks ▪ Language exercises	15 hours (about 7.5 weeks)
5	▪ Interactive lectures by course instructors and invited speakers such as journal editors, reviewers and prolific writers ▪ Small group discussions ▪ Guided analyses of discipline-specific journals ▪ Guided analyses of papers published by PhD students. ▪ Short writing tasks	3 hours (about 1.5 week)

4. Assessment activities/tasks

CILO No	Type of assessment activities/tasks	Weighting	Remarks
1-5	1. Producing a research text Students will be asked to produce one substantial piece of research writing aimed for a qualifying examination (e.g., one part of a qualifying report, one chapter of a thesis, etc.) or a draft of a manuscript aimed for publication in an international refereed journal.	80%	Nil
4	2. Writing a short critique Students will be asked to write a critique of one published work or a group of related published works.	20%	Nil

5. Grading of student achievement:

Grading pattern: Pass (P) and Fail (F). Grading is based on student performance in the two assessment tasks below.

Producing a research text

Letter Grade	Grading criteria in relation to CILOs
P	Content - The writing carries the essential ideas expected of the genre/genre-part that the writing represents. - The ideas are communicated clearly, effectively and succinctly. Use of citations - Extensive reading is evident as reflected by the number of sources cited. - Cited ideas are in general meaningfully engaged and are well-synthesized. - Authorial voice is evident. - Sources of cited ideas are properly documented and formatted. Development of arguments - Arguments are well-supported and well-developed. Organization and format - The writing is effectively sectioned. - Ideas within and across sections are well-connected. Language - The writing displays an appropriate mastery of the English language the scholar register. - No plagiarism is detected.

F	Content • The piece is on the whole incomplete and many essential ideas are missing. • Ideas are vaguely communicated. Use of citations • The piece carries very few citations. • Cited ideas do not cohere and the purposes of citing them are mostly unclear. • Authorial voice is in general lacking. • Sources of cited ideas are inadequately documented and/or poorly formatted. Development of arguments • Arguments are poorly supported or under-developed. Organization and format • Sectioning is ineffectively done. • Continuity of ideas within/across sections is lacking. Language • The writing displays a poor command of the English language and the scholar register. • Plagiarism is detected.

Writing a short critique

Letter Grade	Grading criteria in relation to CILOs
P	Content • The writing provides a summary and a critique of a published work(s). • Content of the published work(s) is accurately represented in the summary. • The critique is cogently developed and demonstrates an adequate use of argumentation techniques discussed in the course (e.g., grounds, warrants, backing, qualifications, rebuttals, etc.). Organization • The writing is well-organized. Language • Ideas are communicated clearly, effectively and succinctly. • The piece reflects an appropriate mastery of the English language and the scholarly register. • No plagiarism is detected.
F	Content • Either the summary of the published work(s) or the critique is missing. • The content of the published work(s) is inaccurately presented. • The critique is under-developed and on the whole lacks cogency. • Use of argumentation techniques discussed in the course is either absent or inadequate. Organization • The writing is poorly organized. Language • There is a general lack of clarity in the ideas communicated. • The writing reflects a poor command of the English language and the scholarly register. • Plagiarism is detected.
