Dr. Yueming Yan is an Assistant Professor at the Faculty of Law, The Chinese University of Hong Kong (CUHK). She has been researching and teaching in areas of international trade law, international investment arbitration and policy, dispute resolution, sustainable development, China's laws, comparative law, and empirical legal studies. Her articles have appeared in the Journal of International Economic Law, the Asian Journal of WTO & International Health Law and Policy, and in the edited collections published by Routledge and Edward Elgar. Her PhD dissertation – Improving international investment law's treatment of (anti-) corruption: Towards a more balanced approach – was awarded the 2022 Award on International Investment Arbitration Law in memory of Piero Bernardini. Yueming is also an Assistant Editor of the Asian Yearbook of International Economic Law (Springer).

Yueming has engaged in many training programs for government officials from around the world and instructed sessions on managing international investment treaty commitments and exploring innovative mechanisms for multi-party dispute resolution. Before joining CUHK Law, Yueming was a Visiting Assistant Professor and a Global PhD Fellow at Singapore Management University Yong Pung How School of Law and Singapore International Dispute Resolution Academy.
