

Notification from the Emergency Response Unit (ERU) (62)

During the past six months, the operations, and learning, teaching and research activities of the University have been severely affected.

The vendors of the major catering outlets on campus indicated earlier that they have encountered operational difficulties. After several rounds of negotiations and coordination with the vendors, the catering outlets manage to partially resume services. Heads and Deans are encouraged to allow flexible lunch hours in order to alleviate lunch traffic at the catering outlets as appropriate. The University will also set up a pickup point for staff and students to collect food delivery from outside vendors during lunch hours.

Meanwhile, the University has received a lot of positive feedback from staff and students, welcoming the campus-wide security measures recently implemented, including the installation of barriers and gates and strengthening of access control. These give them a better sense of security and safety when returning campus to work and study.

As always, your safety is our top priority. No doubt these arrangements and measures may result in some inconvenience to staff and students and we seek your continued understanding, patience and cooperation.

We will continue to take the needs of staff and students into consideration while progressively re-open other facilities to prepare for the new semester.
