University Announcement

Anti-virus and special work arrangements

Notification from the Emergency Response Unit (ERU) (79)

The University has been closely monitoring and proactively responding to the development of the epidemic in order to reduce the risk of virus spreading since early January. It is understood that we were the first university to make portable electronic thermometers available at the main access points to campus.

The University has also planned for installing a number of infrared temperature checking systems on campus. Although the orders have taken time to arrive, two of the systems, including one at the main access point to the University, were installed on 3 March. Three others will be installed next week. The University will continue to implement measures that require everyone to have their body temperature taken before entering the campus.

Other anti-virus measures include intensifying cleaning operations on campus, providing hand sanitisers at all the main access points and installing electronic access control systems to prevent unauthorised outsiders from entering.

The University continues to maintain normal services and operation, and the work-from-home special arrangement for the staff of academic and administrative units will be extended until 15 March. Department head should refer to Notification from the Emergency Response Unit \(ERU\) \(78\) for making proper arrangements.
